

2018 Benchmarking Training

Learn How to Comply with the City of St. Louis's Building Energy Awareness Ordinance

City of St. Louis Building Energy Awareness Ordinance

On January 27, 2017, the City of St. Louis Board of Aldermen unanimously passed an energy benchmarking ordinance that requires municipal, institutional, commercial and multifamily residential buildings whose square footage is equal to or greater than 50,000 to track and report their energy and water usage annually to the City's Building Division. Privately owned buildings are required to benchmark and submit data by April 1, 2018 using the free, online tool ENERGY STAR Portfolio Manager. Full details about the ordinance are available at www.stlbenchmarking.com.

The U.S. Green Building Council - Missouri Gateway Chapter, the City of St. Louis, and partners are co-hosting several opportunities to learn how to comply.
